LI: To explain a geographical issue

The following notice has been found pinned on a lamp post outside a small forest which is home to families of badgers and a rare species of plant:

Dear residents. My name is Baron von Buildmore. Last week I was driving through this area in my enormous car and I thought how boring all these trees and animals were. I thought that this area could be put to better use so I am applying to the council for permission to cut down the forest and build a huge supermarket and multi-storey car park! I promise that you will forget all about the dead badgers when the construction is complete and you have a new building here instead.

Write a short letter to the council explaining why it would be a bad idea to grant planning permission to Baron von Buildmore.
